EXEMPTION FROM CHAPTER 103F, HRS

6. Describe how procurement by competitive means is either not practicable or not advantageous to the State:
Because the needs of each participant cannot be predetermined, it is not practical or advantageous to competitively procure OJT. The OJT must be tailored to fit the needs of each participant, each of whom may have a different set of characteristics and circumstances that must be considered and accommodated to the extent possible. The specific services and activities to be provided will be based on the individual's employment barriers, interests, and skills and the short-term and long-term vocational goals identified by that individual in concert with the case manager. The design of services consists of many diverse variables that make it difficult to secure suitable worksites to accommodate the need of each individual. Variables may include but are not limited to the individual's availability in terms of worksite location, days and hours, and the type of day-to-day supervision needed for each individual. The number of job vacancies and types of jobs available by employers also cannot be predetermined. OJT contracts are possible only if the employer has an appropriate job opening and is willing to hire and provide training to participants who lack the skills level required for a specific job. DLIR had two employers that hired 2 OJT participants as an Inventory Clerk and Administrative Assistant from November 1, 2008 to June 30, 2011. The individual nature of OJTs prohibits competitive procurement. The employers used by DLIR for OJT varies from year to year since it is dependent on the needs of each participant. DLIR cannot account for the needs of each participant in advance. Therefore, establishing a list of employers once a year limits DLIR's ability to use an employer who may have an immediate job opening if the employer has not submitted an application. The placement of a participant into OJT is subject to whether an employer is willing to hire the participant for the job opening. The competitive procurement to establish a list of employers may result with a list of employers that may not have immediate job openings at the time that DLIR needs to place a participant in OJT. The lowest price resulting in a competitive procurement is not advantageous to DLIR because it contradicts with the intent of the program which encourages self-sufficiency of participants. DLIR also reimburses the employer for up to 50 percent of the participant's wages for cost associated with training the participant of job requirements. The wages are non-negotiable since wages paid to OJT participant by the employer must be the same wages and benefits as employees similarly employed by the employer.
7. Describe the reason for the selection of the provider including a description of how the procedure ensured the maximum fair and open competition practicable:
OJTs are used on "as needed basis" and tailored to individual needs and preference. The circumstance guiding the individual service plan greatly depends on various variables which include, but are not limited to, the individual's availability in terms of hours, days, location of work site, and the type of day-to-days upervisionn ecessaryfo r eachi ndividual. For theses ervices,W DD staff will attemptt to provide as many employers with the opportunity to participate as possible through marketing efforts. In accordance with Section6 67 of 20 CFR Part 652, dated August 11, 2000, employers must meet specific requirements before a participant is placed in an OJT with the employer. These requirements include, but not limited to, the company has operated at the location for 120 days, participant hired for the job opening do not displace other employees or reduce the hours of any cun.ently employed employees, and participant is provided with the same terms of employment, working conditions, compensationa nd fringe benefits as the employerp rovidest o other employees in similar occupations by that employer. Duration of OJT is limited to the period of training not exceed six months unless the participant warrants longer training because of exceptional circumstances.
8. Describe the state agency's internal controls and approval requirements for the exempted procurement:
The WDD case manager or counselor will request the OJT in writing. The counselor's supervisor, local office manager, branch manager, administrator, and Director must approve the OJT request before the participant's first day on the job. DLIR will retain copies of all requests in the participant's file and fiscal office. Payments will follow normal payment procedures as for other cost items. Post performance of the employer will be analyzed and performance must be deemed at least satisfactory.
9. List the state agency personnel, by position title, who will be involved in the approval process and administration of the contract:
